Learning Outcome

Understanding the influence of India's religious types

Content

Different religions came to India at different periods. This led to the formation of new ideas in the medieval period. As a result of the mutual influence of these ideas, the Bhakti movement & the Sufi movement emerged. Sufis were those who showed reluctance to luxurious life & gave predominance to spiritual life.

Concept / Ideas / Understanding

* In the Islamic texts Sufism was represented by the word 'tasawwuf'.

* According to some historians, the word Sufism was derived from the word 'suf' meaning wool. To some other scholars it was derived from 'safa' meaning cleanliness.

* They considered devotion as a means to reach close to the God.

* They preached to respect all human beings.

* Khwaja Mo'inudeen Chishti of Ajmer (Rajasthan) was one of the famous sufi saints.

centres of socio-cultural life at this period. Khwaja Moinuddin Chishti of Ajmer (Rajasthan) was one of the famous sufi saints. He opined reciting devotional songs as a way to get close to God.

Concluding Activity

The sufi helped to maintain relations among different religious during the Sultanate & Mughal periods.
Therefore, the devotion as a means to reach close to God put forward by Khwajah made the sociocultural life of that period.
